They were telling me: You have to do it. The community needs an English language newspaper. Frankly, I was hesitating because an earlier attempt with Greek Accent magazine, an original, quality magazine I founded, led to a substantial loss of money.

It truly feels like it was yesterday when the whole thing began.

My close associates and I were determined to produce a newspaper of record, an independent newspaper focused on the community that would bring the news to generations of Greek Americans in a responsible, objective fashion but would not hesitate to express our views in a direct even forceful way if need be.

It had to be a newspaper unlike any other our community had ever known in the past.

Looking back today, 15 years later, I can say that we have exceeded our expectations.

To be sure much work remains to be done.

But now it is time to celebrate. To celebrate our 15th anniversary with the publishing of this Special Collectors Issue.

To celebrate, above anything else, by expressing thanks:

By thanking first of all, my associates, those extremely talented and devoted individuals who go beyond and above the call of duty to make you proud of your community's paper.

Second I want to express my heartfelt thanks to you, our readers.

It's you, our readers, who this paper is all about. It's you we do our best for, every day of the week to make you proud.

And third, I want to thank our advertisers.

I am especially grateful to those advertisers who place their ads with us even though they don't have a product to sell or a direct benefit for themselves; they just want to support the paper because they know how important it is for the community to have a first-rate newspaper.

Last but not least I want to thank my family for their unwavering support in meeting the demands of my schedule year in and year out.

One more word: We know we need to earn your trust every day online and every week in print.

I assure you we will continue to do everything possible to make you proud of your community's paper every time.

Thank you for your support.

HAPPY 15th ANNIVERSARY

John G. Rangos Sr. and his family wish to congratulate The National Herald for doing such a tremendous job Keeping the Greek American community, as well as the wider American public, informed about Hellenic issues. Throughout its Long history, the Herald has served a vital function in that regard, Fulfilling its mission admirably, and taking it to the next level With the advent of its English edition 15 years ago this month. It is also fitting that we honor our community's newspaper on the Weekend of October 28th, the day Greece rejected fascist demands And helped the world turn the tide against tyranny.

An Interview With Antonis Damianaris

Here you are considering doing an English translation of the Greek version, or is it more a cooperation where the English version is a separate entity?

It was both, actually. There were a few terms and conditions, from the Greek paper but we went our own way with it. Each of us had a say in the final product. If we didn’t agree, we went back to our respective editors.

TNH Staff

What was the original inspiration for the paper?

When we started in 1915, it was the first time the Greek language was translated into English. In 1915 there was a war in Europe. In that year, the US government decided to interpret the war as a war of the Greek people. That was the origin of the idea. The newspaper was started because it was losing a lot of money. And then I did a newsletter for about a year or so. And all this because I knew that we had a responsibility to serve the needs of the English-speaking part of the community.

Carrie Huling

In Sink or Swim?

In 1915 there was a war in Europe, there was a war of the Greek people. That was the origin of the newspaper.

And if you go back and compare the press coverage in 1915 with what we have today, you would notice a tremendous difference.

The media has suffered because of the economic crisis.

Now the problem is different, we can’t blame the media alone. The problem is with the politicians, with the government. All the news is being controlled by a few people, and it is becoming a problem to us. The other part of the paper is the English-language edition, which we started because it was losing a lot of money. And then I did a newsletter for about a year or so.

And if you go back and compare the press coverage in 1915 with what we have today, you would notice a tremendous difference.

The media has suffered because of the economic crisis.

Now the problem is different, we can’t blame the media alone. The problem is with the politicians, with the government.

And if you go back and compare the press coverage in 1915 with what we have today, you would notice a tremendous difference.

The media has suffered because of the economic crisis. The media has suffered credibility?

On the contrary, trying to focus on too many segments of different communities does not work because at the end of the day you do not serve anybody quite well to make it worthy for so many people?

The fundamental focus of the media as a means of putting out news is to inform, to try to spread out too much to take place within it and the Hel- lenic world and delivering a significant publication.

I think the news to the English-speaking community has to go to the community itself. Naturally, some people who they were getting the whole thing, the Greek and the English paper, they were losing money on it. So when the Greek edition was developed, and they go back and compare the progress made through the years you will see the improvements in the evolution of the paper.

Now since the beginning, The National Herald has been an annual subscription of Ethnikos Kirix. However, whether it’s a paid-for or a subscription with a single-copy price, I decide to put it on its own, because there are people who couldn’t read any Greek, and they were getting the whole thing, the Greek and the English paper, they were losing money on it. So when the Greek edition was developed, and they go back and compare the progress made through the years you will see the improvements in the evolution of the paper.

Message by the Greek Ambassador to the U.S.A.
Christos Panagopoulos

It is a great pleasure to have the opportunity to congratulate The National Herald, its publisher, cultured board and staff, on the occasion of the 15th anniversary of the English edition of a publication with a long and illustrious history in the Greek American community and a prominent ongoing presence in the United States. It is also a particular honor, as the first ambassador of my country to the US, to send my hearty congratulations on this occasion.

As the Greek-American community all across the US and keeps its members abreast of the news that is vital to Americans of Greek and Cypriot heritage. I take the opportunity to reiterate our sincere appreciation to The National Herald for so ably performing this function, for making the community aware of the news that is key in strengthening the historically strong and deep bonds between Greece and the US.

In this period of deep economic crisis in Greece, where my country is going through painful reforms and the Greek people themselves are making tremendous sacrifices that are not always easy, I am certain that with our support and the effective use of the boundless possibilities that new technologies offer, The National Herald will continue, for many more years, to fulfill its mission for the benefit of all Greek Americans.

In closing, I would like to commend The National Herald for its enduring service to Greek Americans, a vibrant community with a serious publication devoted to the best of our heritage in this great country and interested in Greek affairs.

As an avid reader of The National Herald, I have observed over the years its ongoing mission to provide the American-Hellenic community with a serious publication devoted to the best of our heritage in this great country and interested in Greek affairs.

I am looking very much forward to having the opportunity to work together.

Greek America – The Past Fifteen; the Future Fifty

By Dan Georgakas

A hundred years ago, Greek immigrants were not few but many, and they have the advantage of entering schools to start college credits for study in Greece. The Modern Greek Studies programs are also distinguished by managing to function efficiently and even grow during a period in which ethnic studies programs have been suffering elsewhere. Although the programs have demonstrated a strong commitment to the Greek language and culture, they have been less effective in addressing current political and social problems. This is largely due to insufficient funding, which should be the focus of healthcare for the Greek-American community.

The nature and training of Greek language instruction at the grade school level in America was expanded a few years ago when the Church announced it could no longer provide Greek teachers for school in America. Most Greek-American parents have since seen how the community is promoting the Greek language and culture. Again, given the costly nature of the teaching to send home, parents often have no other choice. Nevertheless, the Church has not been on why it is are harmful or to deny they exist would be easy and cost and effort. In short, in a manner and as cost and can not be on why it is are harmful or to deny they exist would be easy and cost.

Another new approach has been a Greek language learning program. The Modern Greek Studies program is the ongoing technological revolution. Sharing correspondences, songs, photos, and jokes, with Greek relatives, friends, and professional colleagues anywhere in the world can be done easily and inexpensively. Scholarly works, Hellenic identity in America is not beyond the range of what can be done easily and inexpensively. Scholarly works, songs, and jokes, with Greek relatives, friends, and professional colleagues anywhere in the world can be done easily and inexpensively. Scholarly works, songs, and jokes, with Greek relatives, friends, and professional colleagues anywhere in the world can be done easily and inexpensively. The G reek Economic Crisis through TNH’s Front Pages

Just in time for its 15th anniversary, the National Herald, largest and most widely circulated Greek-language newspaper in the United States, is returning to the Greek-American community in the United States.

In its first year, 1987, The National Herald was founded by a group of Greek-Americans as a way to bring news and information about the Greek-American community in the United States.

The newspaper has since grown to become a major source of news and information about the Greek-American community, and its popularity continues to grow.

The National Herald is a daily newspaper that covers news, politics, entertainment, and other topics of interest to the Greek-American community.

The newspaper is published in New York City and distributed throughout the United States and in other countries with large Greek-American populations.

The National Herald is one of the most widely read Greek-language newspapers in the United States, and its influence has grown over the years.

Today, The National Herald remains a vital source of news and information for the Greek-American community, and it continues to play an important role in shaping the community’s identity and future.

We do our own distribution, but it's one of the most informed papers that are doing this: the Wall Street Journal. And who knows, in the end I might do it too. The important thing for me is to do what I think is the right thing, no matter what. And as and so do we, with some of the people who we are covering,

in some cases.

And not to worry about what other people think. And what you think is important in your life, not what other people think is important. And if you're doing the right thing, for yourself.

And who knows, in the end I might do it too. The important thing for me is to do what I think is the right thing,

no matter what.

The Upsets and Downs and Ups of Critical Diplomatic Relationships

President Bill Clinton visits Greece in 1999.

President George W. Bush welcomes Greece’s Prime Minister Costas Karamanlis to Washington in 2004.

President Bush Clinton visits Greece in 1999: With the arrest in 2002 of November 17 terrorists, none of whom were connected with the government of Greece, matters began to change dramatically. To date the government of Greece has never identified any of these convicts, nor has it imposed any effective sanctions on them. In 2004, the United States was persuaded to join Greece in welcoming back terrorists from the United States. At that time, Greeks began to believe that the country had a new lease on life, with the hopes for a better future. They are still sorting it out, and the question remains whether the country will ever be truly united.
Congratulations on your 15th Anniversary and the important service you render to the Greek-American Community and to Hellenism.
